It is what is seen

1

Something exists, that is sensing a surrounding something;
in such a manner that it changes...

...That which surrounds it, is what is seen:
It is seeing.

2

Enter a squirrel.

It is not doubted that it is a squirrel:
It has lived in a tree,
it is holding a nut in its hand,
and now it is standing being watched.

3

Doubt arises though:
Is it a squirrel with a nut,
or is it a masked hen who has just laid an egg.

4

It does not matter;
It is the offspring of a something,
seeing the offspring of a something.

5

Something exists, that is sensing a something contained within;
in such a manner that it changes.

(it is that which lies within, that is seen)
